

Crop development report– Hallertau

June 2026

monthly temperature

monthly rainfalls

The crops have developed very well so far, and nearly all varieties have reached their full height by the end of June.

In addition, disease pressure is currently low and under stable control.

The early varieties are beginning to pre-bloom, and the recent rainfall—though varying by region—is giving the plants some welcome relief after last week's heat wave.

However, additional rainfall during the blooming period is necessary, as soil moisture reserves are severely depleted following the long dry period.