

Crop development report– Hallertau

May 2026

monthly temperature

monthly rainfalls

The start of the year was very cold, with temperatures in line with the historical long-term average. February was exceptionally wet, while the remaining months were rather dry.

Since the weekend, cooler temperatures have returned, accompanied by widespread and much-needed precipitation. The stocks are well developed and have already reached around three-quarters of their final height.

Spring fieldwork were proceeded out smoothly under dry conditions and with good field accessibility.
